Hongroup, July 22nd, 1985. WEEN the protocol of the Tientsin Treaty between France and China was signed; we expressed the fear that-it being such surrender of what the French had been fighting for-the Chinese would become so marked manner in their demeanour towards foreigners. This fear would seem to have found realization at 'Peking and some other places. A Peking correspondent of our that the natives of that city-never remarkable for civility-are more impertinent. than them used to be. "Foreigners going through the streets," he says, "receive far more annoyance than formerly. It seems impossible for any group of natives to refrain from insulting a passer-by in one way or another." As the correspondent remarks, this conduct is greatly to be deployed. as it effectually retards the growth of that, friendly feeling which foreigners would h glad to see existing. In the neighbouring empire of Japan a foreigner can travel from one end of the country to the other, so long as be behaves himself with decorum and courtesy, and meet with nothing but friendliness and civility. It is indeed in no small degree due to the perfect security and freedom from insult enjoyed in the land of the Rising Sun that so many foreign tourists are induced to visit that beautiful and interesting tion accorded to most foreigners in China. all the charms of the scenery and delight of the baths would fail to attract them. Owing in great part to the known hostility and unfriendly disposition of the natives, China is almost a closed book to Europeu flying visit to the foreign settlements of Shanghai, where they see the Chinese it is true, but of Chinese life or scenery practically nothing. They pass on to more hospitable regions and spend their time and money in Japan. The amount annually spent by visitors to Japan is, of course, but a trifle, but the knowledge thus disseminated of the country, its products and manufactures, lends to a largely increased demand for Japanese art productions. It is not for the sake of such advantages, however, that the Japanese race show so much courtesy and kindness to the foreigner; it is their natural instinct to be polite to the stranger, and it is the determination of the Government to afford perfect protection to the stranger within their gates. It would be well if the Peking Government sult, even if they could not endow the Chinese people with the native politeness of their neighbours. THE DEFENCE OF THURSDAY ISLAND

AND ALBANY. SYDNEY, 30th June. The correspondence which has passed between the various Australian Governments relative to Hongkong Rope Manufacturing. Company, Li- FYHE Undersigned have been appointed Sole the federal defence of Thursday Island and Albany has been published. Admiral Tryon, to Chinese Imperial Loan of 1884 A-2 per cent. whom the correspondence was referred for report, says:-- "This subject opens out the very important question of the protection of outlying ports, especially when they are coaling ports, and inseparably connected with the question are Albany, on the west, and Thursday Island on the north. At the early part of this year I was at Albany, and was much struck with its importance. The harbour is not large, but yet it is convenient, and is capable of extension and im-provement. Both the inward and outward steam trade of the colonies pass it, and the port cannot fail to become of great importance both in a military and commercial sense. These remarks apply with equal force also to Thursday Island at the northern extremity of this country. At the time to which I refer the coal stowed at those ports for the convenience of vessels that otherwise would pass them was in a condition that simply invited an enemy to come and help himself, and that at our very threshold in both directions, so that he would arrive at our doors with full capacity for mischief. If occupied by an enemy, such places are so defensible that it would cost much to expel him. At Albany there is a sparse population in a scattered township ou the shores of the harbour, and its defence is in the hands of seventy Volunteers and riflemen. As to Thursday Island, I am informed that from twenty to thirty steamers pass each month while the population consists of about 300, chiefly composed of native races from the adjecent is-land east and west. The ports at the extremity of these coasts and of their respective colonies obtain far less protection from cruising aquadrons thandothecentral ports. The importance of these ports has only aprung into existence in quite recent years - The external trade of Queensland, New South Wales, Victoria, and South Australia passes close to them, and they should not only be ports of supply, but ports of refuge and defence. The value of these ports, both in a military and commercial sense, will certainly increase with the growth of Australia. I need hardly add that recently they have been the subject of a good deal of consideration. Many telegrams and many letters have passed concerning them, and something has been effected with a view to make such arrangements. as may be practicable in the best interests of the nation. Albany can readily, and at no great cost, be protected sufficiently for the hour, and, as years roll on, more and more doubtless will be done. The position of Thursday Island and the Manile islands in its immediate neighbourhood in Torres Straits are sure to command attention, and its great geographical and strategical importance will force itself into consideration. There are no other positions of equal importance from the above points of view, as well as from a general point of view in the whole Australian littoral." Sir Alexander Stuart has forwarded copies of the correspondence and Admiral Tryon's report | STATION. to the Premiers of the other colonies, and says, "At present I shall only observe that inasmuch as two points are of importance to the whole of Australia, it may be a matter for consideration how far the other colonies would be prepared to assist the colonies in which these ports are res-- pectively situated in their defence, and how far the colonies unitedly should invite the Imperial Government to join in such a measure. The pitch at the sides of the lake is perfectly hard and cold; but as one walks towards the middle with the shoesoff, in order to wade through the water, the heat gradually increases, the pitch then strongly impregnated with bitumen and sulphur, and the impression of the feet is left upon the pitch. It is possible during the rainy season to walk over most of the lake, but during hot wrather a great part cannot be approached.
